Acetdent to the Courier.

When the new Courier was backing out from the wharf yesterday morning with the Decitoven Singing Society and its friends, for Steubenville, she ran into the Cleveland, Lorain & Wheeling wharf boat, knocking a little hole in her side, above the water line, and tearing away three of her stationary guards. The damage was not serious, but many of the passengers became frightened and a few left the boat. The excursion was a large one, and saide from this little accident everything passed off smoothly and merrily. Joe Kramer's band accompanied it and made good music.

"COLD SHORT'S" OBSERVATIONS

On a New Coking Coal, a Mud Drum Device and Other Things. Mr. P. H. Moors, ("Cold Short") in his latest letter to the St. Louis Age of Steel, has the following matter of interest here. First speaking of real estate activity at Pittsburgh, he adds:

at Pittsburgh, he adds:

I cite this to give a small measure of credibility to my remarks above, and to a statement in one of my recent letters—that this portion of the Ohio valley from Wheeling to Pittsburgh was not only the fairest, the most productive, the most favored by the Almighty with natural advantages and auxiliaries, but that the other requisite elements, established power and means, the wisdom to appreciate and the ability and enterprise to develop and utilize, are also present. And Wheeling will come in a good second; she has all these qualities, all these elements, all these qualities, all these facilities, and she will demonstrate that she has all the requisites to give color, tone and finish to the picture that I hope to portray to her before another year. Pittsburgh and Wheeling are sisters in commercial possithe picture that I hope to portray to her before another year. Pittaburgh and Wheeling are sisters in commercial possi-bilities and probabilities; a consonance of ways and means, and their proximity will prevent hostile rivalry; the more power-ful and advanced sister has nothing but words and actions of encouragement and good cheer for the smaller and weaker one. Includ Wheeling is likely to have ne. In coke Wheeling is likely to have one. In coke Wheeling is likely to have a very great advantage, discounting the Connellaville coke merits, which have been so advantageous to Pittsburgh.

A new vein of coal has been recently opened near Fairmont, W. Va., on the line of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, sixty miles from Wheeling, from which a coke has been made. The coke is bright, extremely hard and clear gray. I was shown an analysis made of it, from samples taken indiscriminately from a barrel full, which gave: water, 0.42; volatile matter, 0.43; fixed carbon, 01.85; sulphur, 0.48; phosphorus, a trace; sah, 0.82; color matter, 0.43; fixed carbon, 01.55; mlphur, 0.45; phosphorus, a trace; sah, 6.82; color of ash, brown. From a half a dozen of analyses of Connellaville coke, published by State authorities, 1 selected the most favorable, which gives water, 0.30; volatile matter, 0.48; fixed carbon, 80.57; sulphur, 0.82 phosphorus, 0.14; ash, 9.11; color of ash, reddish brown. As the great features of excellence in Connellaville coke is the small ash and its extreme hardness, there seems to be a formidable rival about to enter the field to rebuke the pride and stiff-neckedness of the Connellaville operators.

stiff-neckedness of the Connellsville operators.

I think there is plenty of enterprise in Wheeling to follow up this lead and develop its possibilities. I would suggest in this uonnection that enterprise, according to the enlightened acceptation of the word or term, means a zealous and somewhat unselfish willingness to undertake or engage in some venture which requires boldness, spirit and energy, not waiting or examining to accertain whether or not there is a 50 percent guarantee in it, or a zealous willingness to let some one else make the start and risk whatever losses there may start and risk whatever losses there may be, and then come in and reap profit from his misfortune.

I have had my attention called recently I have had my attention called recently to two instances in which steel mud drums became practically useless from internal corrosion, with only four or five years' service. I mentioned this fact to several practical experts, among the number to Mr. Frank Hearne, of the Riverside Com-Mr. Frank Hearne, of the Riverside Company. Mr. Hearne, without discussing the matter to any extent, remarked that he had changed the setting of their boilers in this way. Instead of having the mud drums located immediately in front of the bridge wall, or between the bridge and the back wall, he had them in the rear or behind the back wall, will be set the middle of the rear or behind the back wall the back wall the back wall the back wall the set of the set wall, he had them in the rear or behind the back wall, where they were exposed to inspection at any time and were not ex-posed to the flamas and heat of the fire heating the boilers. This, it seems to me, will help to solve the difficulty. The drum will be allowed to fill its intended use, and will be allowed to fill its intended use, and not be used to roast sediment or deposits, mineral or other kinds, which will certainly be precipitated from any water used, filtered, pre-heated in patent heaters or any other treatment, and pass into the mid drum, accumulating in a semi-solid state on the curvilinear bottom. It is reasonable to infer that this cooking process is not only not very salutary for either interest retail without the curvilinear products and the curvilinear products and the curvilinear products are selected. cess is not only not very salutary for either iron or steel surfaces, but will rather the office of the Adams Express Company in the past five or six years. Nearly all the pastages were so sealed as to make it impossible to tell what they contained by looking at them, but a few had the covers broken—by accident, of course—revealing the gilt edge and nice binding of a book, or some other attractive fragment which stimulated the bidding.

One very tightly wrapped parcel was bought, after spirited bidding by nickel steps, for $1.30, and upon opening it the purchaser did not manifest much surprise to find himself the possessor of a $5 meerschaum pipe. Another man had "a cointer," and he bid up a box he was condent contained photographic dry plates, to $5 opats, and then let it go to another bidder. He was glad it did go there when he found it contained four bittles of emulsion of cod liver oil. These bottles were bought from the disappointed first purchaser by a woman, who paid him $1 for his bargain, saying she had a sick sister who "could take it."

The worst "sold" of all the buyers was probably a man who paid eighty cents for a neat, small package, and upon opening it found it contain a bottle sent to the late Dr. Schuchardt by a patient for examination. Judge Houston bid on every promising package, his bid being a nickel, round and the did had luck till a long roll, evidently engravings of some sort, was put up.

engravings of some sort, was put up.

"Five centa!" said the Judge.

"Tak it!" said Auctioneer Haller, so suddenly that the Judge jumped. He took it, and hunting a seeluded spot in the market house, proceeded to open it with care. It is needless to say the Judge's Jeffersonian Democracy revolted when he found his purchase to be thirty-six lithographs of Biaine and Logan, their distinguished faces surrounded with symbolic wreaths, and an alleged Goddess of Liberty smiling benignantly between.

The Judge was not to be "left" that way. He opened his roll out on a meat bench and retailed the pictures at a cent aplece. They were in good demand, and the Judge's device to come out shead created a little boom for "the old ticket." He only realized about twenty cents, for a sprightly little girl managed to steal about fifteen of the lithographs and present them to darkies in the crowd, and the Judge gallantly gave away one, the recipient being a woman who said: "Them's my stripe, but I haven't got no cent."

A well known young man about town bought a dilapidated carpetbag which he expressed his belief contained burglars' tools. He got if for thirty-five cents, and found in it about a hundred pounds of scrap tin, bricks and boulders. It was addressed to a boarding house keeper on the South Side, and the charges were $4.75. Inside was note, reading:

But he was not.

Two steel plow points, unwrapped, sold for 5 cents. A straw carrier for a threshing machine was knocked down to John Haberfield for ten cents. He said it had more than that worth of straps on it. A steel cutter bar of a mowing machine sold for fifteen cents. Six or eight pick axes and several other tools used by laborers—worth at least $10—sold for $1 0.5. THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH. Its Origin and History Traced by Bey. B. B

Swope Last Night. Rev. R. Rush Swope, rector of St. Math-ews church, gave to his hearers last evening a most entertaining discourse on the origin of the Episcopal church. He traced it far back to the early days after Christ, when it took its root. In the half hour when it took its root. In the half hour that he devoted to this entertaining subject he aimed to touch and explain all the important changes and alliances that have taken place. Though this had to be hurriedly done, it was done in so clear and admirably concise a manner that one was readily able to comprehend and grasp all the points. Mr. Swope in conclusion urged that more work be put forth for the church, and that she be strengthened in every way.

After he had been here a short time, a telegram was received from a hotel at Zanesville by Mr. F. D. Norton, of the McLure, warning him against Pratt. Rev. Mr. Sweeney, who was announce to deliver ten lectures on baptism, giving the views of the Disciples' church on that subject, had to return home Saturday, on account of sickness. He delivered four lectures, but the discussion excited little pathy with the previous lectures, but the discussion excited little general interest, compared with what might have been shown had there been a debate at the time one was first talked about. Mr. Sweeney will return at some future time. Rev. R. F. Keeler preached again yesterday on the subject. Sides which they could no longer claim sole right in and

A reporter dropped in at George Durst's ice cream palors—ice cream palace, he should call it—the other day. Not that this is a new thing for a reporter to do; they are all particular people, and like all discriminating people, always do drop in on Durst when they want ice cream, fine candy or anything else in his line. But on this occasion the reporter noticed a number of pieces of machinery, wheels, shafting and the like, and several workmen placing them. "What's up?" saked the reporter. "The thermometer," said Mr. Durst; "and we are fixing to humble it." "Then you are not going to move out and lesse your place to a rolling mill." "No, sir; that machinery, including that hundred and ten foot, shafting, is to operate as a set of steam fans that will keep the eight trains and the stable like, and several work and continued and several work and continued and several work and lesse your place to a rolling mill."
